DUTY ON SUGAR.

Rate to be increased so as to provide additional revenue.

The first regular cabinet meeting—Two will be held each week—Democratic Senators Caucus—Sylvester Seovel Released—Burglars at Work.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The sugar schedule was considered Tuesday by the republican members of the ways and means committee. It was decided to increase the rate of duty so as to provide for additional revenues to the amount of $20,000,000. Present appearances indicate that the duty on raw sugar will be about 1½¢ a pound, scaling this to 1½¢ a pound in the case of countries which give us equal reciprocal advantages. The purpose is to reduce the differential to the lowest possible rate, not exceeding ½ of one cent a pound.

The first regular cabinet meeting of the new administration was held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. President McKinley intends to keep up the practice of holding conferences with his official advisers twice a week, on Tuesdays and Fridays at the hour named. Whether rainy weather was or was not the cause of it, there was a great falling off in the forces of the office seekers that came to the mansion Tuesday morning. By 11 o'clock, when the cabinet met, they had all gone.

The Times Tuesday afternoon says that a message has been received at the state department from Consul General Lee at Havana, stating that he is informed that Sylvester Seovel, the American newspaper correspondent, now in a Cuban prison, will be released Tuesday.

Some Chicago practices have evidently been brought to Washington by the inauguration crowd. About noon Tuesday the jewelry store of Geromo Desio, on F street, in the busiest part of this city, was robbed of a tray of diamond rings and pins, valued at $3,000. Three men entered the store, one engaging Mr. Desio in conversation under a pretense of making a purchase for a testimonial, while the other two got away with the tray containing the jewels. All of them escaped. A description of the men and of the missing jewelry has been forwarded to all the chief cities.

The democratic senators held a caucus Tuesday afternoon on the subject of the reorganization of the senate, but came to no conclusion. A committee was appointed to confer with the other silver factions in the senate. The only gold democrat who attended the caucus was Senator Lindsay, of Kentucky.

SEEKS MERCY.

Scott Jackson Presents His Plea to Gov. Bradley—His Case Fully Reviewed.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 10.—The first formal application for executive clemency for the alleged murderers of Pearl Bryan will be filed Wednesday morning.

L. J. Crawford, attorney for Scott Jackson, came quietly to Frankfort Tuesday night and saw Gov. Bradley at the state house, where arrangements were made for the presentation of the case. The attorney's brief will be delivered to the governor immediately upon its arrival in this city by the first mail in the morning.

Col. Crawford reviews the testimony in the case in every detail, and it is understood, bases his appeal for executive interference chiefly upon the improbability of the story of the Negro, Geo. H. Jackson.

The application itself simply beseeches the governor of the state to read the record in the case and take such action as the interests of justice demand. It is not believed that there is any direct appeal for a pardon of Scott Jackson, nor will there be any other specific action suggested. The attorney for the man who is sentenced to be hanged on March 20 will simply submit his case to the conscience and the judgment of the governor, without presuming to indicate what course ought to be pursued.

The written argument to be filed by Col. Crawford, it is understood, contains about 5,000 words, and the whole record in the Scott Jackson case which Gov. Bradley is requested to read, contains about 18,000 words.

No man can predict the action of Gov. Bradley. He will perform his duty conscientiously and thoroughly. He has promised to read every line of testimony in both the Jackson and Walling cases, and if he is convinced that he ought to interfere he will do so without counting the cost of public opinion. If he believes them innocent he will pardon them; if he thinks death too severe a punishment for the actual crime he finds them to have committed, he will commute the sentence to imprisonment for life.

Steel Works to Start Up.

BALTIMORE, March 10.—It is authoritatively stated that the works of the Maryland Steel Co., at Sparrow's Point, will start up in all its departments in a few weeks, thus giving employment to over 2,000 men. With all the furnaces in operation, the Maryland Co. has a capacity of producing 1,200 tons of iron daily. The steel rail mill of the company is also being fitted up and will be ready for operation by May. It closed down January 1, 1894. It has a capacity for making 1,200 rails per day.

Willie Haas Must Die.

COLUMBUS, O., March 10.—The supreme court Tuesday overruled the motion for leave to file a petition in error in that court in the case of William Haas, the Cincinnati murderer, and now there is no hope for him to escape the electric chair, unless Gov. Bushnell will commute the sentence.

A Pioneer Farmer Dead.

CHERRY GROVE, O., March 10.—Henry Van Gundy, aged 72, one of the pioneer farmers of Anderson township, died Tuesday morning of apoplexy. He was one of the oldest masons in the township.

IN THE RIVER.

Terrible Disaster Near Hazelton, Ind., Caused by the Flood—Cannibal Train on the Evansville & Terre Haute Wrecked—Several Lives Lost.

VINCENNES, Ind., March 11.—A terrible wreck occurred on the Evansville & Terre Haute railroad Wednesday morning. A south-bound passenger train went into White river between Decker and Hazelton. The entire train is reported to be in the river with only one end of the last coach sticking out. Of 35 passengers only two are said to have escaped. Conductor Sears and Fireman Bowman were lost. The train had passed over the bridge proper and had reached a long steep embankment and trestle. The swollen condition of the river spread it under that part of the track which went down. There are many conflicting stories placing the loss of passengers at from 13 to 65.

The wreck occurred at a point just south of the main span of the White river bridge where a trestle is built over a long fill-in. This fill has since the recent floods been surrounded by water from ten to 15 feet deep. The soggy condition of the ground caused the trestle supports to spread and the entire train plunged into the water. Immediately upon the receipt of the news a messenger was sent overland from here to the scene of the wreck, and when last heard from he had abandoned his buggy on account of bridges washed away and had to swim two streams on horseback. Communication is almost inaccessible, and there is nothing to calm the grave apprehensions felt. The train in descending the embankment tore down the telegraph poles and all communication by wire is cut off. All that the local officers have been able to learn indicates that Engineer McCutcheon, Fireman Bowman, Brakeman Hauelsen, Conductor Sears and three passengers have been taken out dead so far.

A relief party has just returned from the scene of the disaster and report it is not so great as at first reported. The engine, baggage car and smoker went down in the river. The sleeper and ladies coach remained on the track and the majority of the passengers were saved thereby. The passengers in smoker and baggage car, Conductor Sears and Fireman Bowman were lost. Engineer McCutcheon leaped on the bank and escaped. Mr. Henderson, of the Henderson Opera Co., was badly injured. The number of people in the smoker is reported to be about 150. The death of Fireman Bowman is the last one of a family.

It was a very difficult matter to secure accurate information as the railroad was unusually reticent and refused the Evansville and Hazelton newspaper men transportation to the scene of the wreck. The latest and most reliable report is that five were killed and two seriously injured as follows:

Killed: Herbert Allen, of this city, head janitor of the state house, caught in the smoking car and drowned; Jos. Boleman, of Evansville, locomotive fireman; John Sears, of Terre Haute, conductor; two unknown men.

Injured: Brakeman Hauelsen, of this city; J. B. Henderson, brother of ex-State Auditor Henderson. Both are seriously injured but they will recover. They are at a house near the scene of the wreck.

A telephone message from Hazelton is that another crevasse has appeared between White river bridge and the one where the train was wrecked. It is spreading rapidly and the damage to the roadbed will be very serious. It is reported that an overcoat marked J. T. Phillips was found floating on the water near the wreck.

EX-SENATOR DOLPH

Dies at His Home in Oregon from the Shock Following the Amputation of a Leg.

PORTLAND, Ore., March 11.—J. N. Dolph, ex-United States senator from Oregon, died at his home in this city at 10:50 o'clock Wednesday morning after an illness of about two weeks. The cause of death was shock following the amputation of his left leg, which operation was performed Monday afternoon.

EX-SENATOR DOLPH.

For years Mr. Dolph had been suffering from diabetes, and about two weeks ago was forced to confine himself to his bed. While at home he became troubled with an ingrowing toe nail on the left foot. He caused this to be operated upon, and a few days after blood poisoning was manifest. The entire leg below the knee became affected and as a last resort amputation was decided upon. After the amputation Mr. Dolph rallied for a day or two but early Wednesday morning he began to sink and died at 10:50.

Sympathy for Crete.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 11.—The senate Wednesday unanimously adopted a resolution sympathizing with Crete in her struggle for freedom. The resolution applauds the heroic endeavors of King George, of Greece, in opposing the powers.

The Lerol Mine Sold.

TORONTO, Ont., March 11.—A special cablegram says that the famous Lerol mine, of Rossland, B. C., owned by Senator Turner and others of Washington state has been sold to a syndicate of British capitalists for $5,000,000.

THE PILLAGING.

Of the Houses of Christians Still Going on in Crete.

Four Hundred Moslems Killed in the Villages in the Vicinity of Sitia—Russia Determined to Coerce Greece—The Fight at Akrotiri Is Ended.

ATHENS, March 10.—The reply of the Greek government to the ultimatum of the powers having been delivered to the foreign representatives here, preparations for hostilities between Greece and Turkey, which are apparently inevitable, are being hurried forward with all possible speed.

LONDON, March 10.—It was learned in official quarters Tuesday afternoon that there is not the slightest chance that the powers will tolerate the presence of the Greek troops in Canea. So soon as the powers have had time to exchange views on the subject Greece will be notified of the measures which they have decided must be taken for the immediate enforcement of their decision. The negotiations will not last long, for it is known that Germany and Russia are pressing for immediate action.

CANEA, March 10.—Advices from Retimo, on the coast some 30 miles southeast of here, show that the pillaging of the houses and shops of the Christians there is still going on. The vice-consuls stationed at Retimo have asked the consuls here that protection be afforded the Christians.

In Canea itself there has been robbery of houses owned by Christians who are absent from the city. This pillaging is not the work of the Moslem inhabitants but is done by Turkish soldiers. Protests have been made to the acting governor, but no satisfaction was obtained, he saying that the robberies can not be helped as the Turkish soldiers have to pillage to live.

Towfik Pasha, the military governor, has sent to Heraklion for another battalion of troops, which will make the condition of affairs worse than ever.

M. Baraklis, the Greek vice consul, the staff of the consulate and a number of Greek newspaper reporters embarked upon a vessel Tuesday to return to Greece, Adm. Canavaro insisting that his order that they leave the island must be obeyed.

Mr. Boor, the British officer, who was recently appointed to the command of the international gendarmerie, has refused to disband the force at the command of the international committee. He declares that he will not abandon his post until ordered by the sultan to do so.

The fight at Akrotiri ceased at noon Tuesday, the insurgents changing their position, owing to their fears that they would again be bombarded by the foreign warships.

The story of the massacre of Muslims at Sitia will not down, though it has been emphatically denied several times. It was reported again Tuesday with the addition that the consuls at Heraklion had been convinced by witnesses that 400 Moslems were killed in the villages in the vicinity of Sitia.

It was first stated that 2,000 Muslims had been massacred in Sitia.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 10.—A firm resolve is manifested in government quarters fixedly to the policy of coercion toward Greece should the Greek policy necessitate such a course. It is stated here that admirals commanding the foreign fleets in Cretan waters have decided, in addition to blockading the Piraus and the coast of Crete, to fire upon any Greek torpedo boat that approaches the foreign warships.

LONDON, March 10.—A dispatch from Vienna to the Central News says that the Eighty-seventh infantry regiment at Trieste has been ordered to be mobilized in readiness to proceed to Crete.

LONDON, March 10.—The Chronicle Wednesday published a dispatch from Athens saying that the kernel of the situation is that Russia is pursuing Greece with a terrible vindictiveness that it is impossible to explain. It is stated, however, that Russia realizes that millions of Greek Christians in the east yield religious allegiance only to the Greek patriarch at Constantinople, which is a serious bar to Russia's plans. M. Muraviev, the Russian foreign minister, is anxious to remove this bar by humiliating Greece and destroying her influence with the patriarch.

LONDON, March 10.—The communications which Lord Salisbury wired to the powers Monday evening concerning the reply of Greece to the collective note of the powers have resulted in the concurrence of France and Italy with Great Britain that coercive measures toward Greece should be delayed and negotiations continued at Athens. A telegram received at the foreign office from Rome states that the Italian government considers the Greek note of too negative a character to justify the powers in taking immediate action.

CANEA, March 10.—Advices from Hierapetra, on the south coast of the island of Crete, say that Mussulmans in possession of that town were summoned to surrender by the Christian insurgents who were investing the town and that the Mussulmans refused to do so. The insurgents then fired a volley into the fort, which was held by the Moslems, whereupon an Italian cruiser lying off the town fired upon the insurgents, compelling them to retire.

Eighteen Forgery Indictments.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 10.—Eighteen indictments for forgery have been returned by the grand jury against W. J. Dunn, a well-known contractor. The forgeries were on negotiable assignments from the city, and aggregate over $48,000.

Trotting Stallion Acolyte Sold.

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 10.—The trotting stallion Acolyte, by Onward for which Coxe, of commonwealth fame, was sold Tuesday by Geo. H. Watson to E. D. Wilson, of Puxatawney, Pa., for $3,000.

THE BIG FIGHT.

Referee Siler Submits His Interpretation of the Queensberry Rules Which Will Govern the Great Glove Contest.

CARSON CITY, Nev., March 11.—The most delicate subject in connection with the big fight was broached Wednesday when Referee George Siler submitted to Corbett and Fitzsimmons his interpretation of the Queensberry rules. Siler's communication, which was in the nature of a formal letter, was not received with manifestations of joy at either camp.

"Rule 1—To be a fair, stand-up boxing match in a 24-foot ring, or as near that as practicable.

"Rule 2—No wrestling or hugging allowed.

"Rule 3—The rounds to be of three minutes' duration and one minute time between rounds.

"Rule 4—If either man fall, through weakness or otherwise, he must get up unassisted, ten seconds to be allowed him to do so, the other man meanwhile to return to his corner, and when the fallen man is on his legs, the round to be resumed and continued until the three minutes have expired. If one man fails to come to the scratch in the ten seconds allowed, it shall be in the power of the referee to give his award in favor of the other man.

"Rule 5—A man hanging on the ropes in a helpless state with his toes off the ground, shall be considered down.

"Rule 6—No seconds or any other person to be allowed in the ring during the rounds.

"Rule 7—Should the contest be stopped by any unavoidable interference the referee to name time and place, as soon as possible, for finishing the contest, so that the match must be won or lost, unless the backers of both men agree to draw the stakes.

"Rule 8—The gloves to be fair sized boxing gloves of the best quality and new.

"Rule 9—Should a glove burst or come off, it must be replaced to the referee's satisfaction.

"Rule 10—A man on one knee is considered down, and if struck is entitled to the stakes.

"Rule 11—No shoes or boots, with springs allowed.

"Rule 12—The contest in all other respects to be governed by the revised rules of the London prize ring.

"The first three rules need no comment, as they are plain, simple and understood by almost everybody.

"Rule 4, however, requires some analysis, as some of the points are often misconstrued.

"The rule says: If either man fall through weakness or otherwise, he must get up unassisted, three seconds to be allowed him to do so, the other man meanwhile to return to his corner.

"This, of course, was intended to prevent a man from standing over his fallen opponent. It probably never occurred to the framers of the rules that at times a man either falls or is knocked down in his opponent's corner. If then, the man on his feet retires to his corner as the rules direct, he will be standing over his fallen opponent and doing just what the rules mean he shall not do.

"To avoid all disputes on this score, I will simply instruct you in case of a knock-down to retire at least ten feet from your fallen opponent, to give him an opportunity to rise.

"Rule 12, which says: The contest in all other respects to be governed by the revised rules of the London prize ring, is, I consider, one of the most important of the 12 rules, and appears to be the bone of contention in almost every contest. It has been the custom of referees, myself among them, to inquire of the principals whether they choose to hit in clinches with one arm free and also on breakaways. Invariably the principals agree not to hit in clinches, or on breakaways, but they generally forget all about their agreement and frequently violate it.

"Neither of you, I am sure, desire to win the coming contest on a technical foul and to avoid any such contingency through hitting in clinches with a free arm and in breakaways, I will rule:

"That you be permitted to hit in clinches with one arm free and also on breakaways. With this interpretation of this rule announced a week before the contest, you will both have ample time to practice these important points, and will have no cause for complaint should either of you be caught off your guard.

"Pivot blows, missing with either hand and whipping back with the elbow, meeting an opponent with or deliberately striking him with the elbow or knees, are barred and will be considered foul. Should any of the above blows have any material effect on the result of the contest I shall use my judgement accordingly. Should any of the seconds of either principal enter the ring during a round to render any assistance to the fighters or prevent them from committing a foul or to throw water on them, it shall be deemed a foul.

"Trivial fouls may be unintentionally committed by either of you, which, unless they have a direct bearing on the result, will be overlooked at my discretion.

Millions of Cook Books Given Away.

There is one large house in this country that has taken business on its turn and means to ride in on the rising tide. Alive to the signs of better times and to the best interests of the people, they are now circulating among families a valuable publication known as the Charles A. Vogeler Company's Cookery Book and Book of Comfort and Health, which contains very choice information on the subject of cooking. Receipts for the preparation of good, substantial and dainty dishes, prepared especially for it by a leading authority, will be found in its pages. Much care has been taken in its preparation and distribution, with the hope that it will be just the thing needed for housekeepers, and just the thing needed also for the care of the health and household. IF WE HAD THE TIME.

If I had the time to find a place
And sit me down full face to face
With my better self, that cannot show
In my daily life that rushes so;
It might be then I would see my soul
Was stumbling still toward the shining goal.
I might be nerved by the thought sublime—
If I had the time!

If I had the time to let my heart
Speak out and take in my life a part,
To look about and to stretch a hand
To a comrade quartered in no-luck land, Ah, God! If I might but just sit still
And hear the note of the whippoorwill,
I think that my wish with God's would rhyme—
If I had the time!

If I had the time to learn from you
How much for comfort my work could do;
And I told you then of my sudden will
To kiss your feet when I did you ill!
If the tears a back of the coldness feigned
Could flow, and the wrong be quite explained—
Brothers, the souls of us all would chime,
If we had the time!
—Richard Burton, in Boston Watchman.

Herbert arose, took off his hat and coat, reentered himself and commenced a careful perusal of the will.

The instrument commenced very much as did all wills at that period, or as they do now, for that matter.

"In the name of God, amen, I, John

Loyd, being of sound body and mental health, yet realizing the uncertainty of life, do declare the foregoing writings to be my last will and testament."

"Then followed several small bequests to some who had formerly been in the banker's service, remembrances to his slaves, directions as to his funeral and burial, and then the following clause:

"To my nephew, Herbert Lathrop, now in my employ, I give and bequeath the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000)."

Here was the first point where Herbert halted in his perusal of the will,

but not for long did he halt.

"Five thousand dollars. That will never do, my uncle. You will kindly permit me to make it $50,000," which he proceeded to do by adding one more cipher after the five and the other three, changing the v to f, running the e up and crossing it for a t, and adding a y, thus making the clause in the will read:

"To my nephew, Herbert Lathrop, I give and bequeath, the sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000)."

"That will leave me in rather better shape, uncle. Let's see. That, I suppose, would be called doctored a will,

but what says the next clause?"

"All the residue of my estate, both real and personal, monies, stocks and bonds, lands and slaves, I give and bequeath to my daughter, Fannie Loyd, to have and to hold forever, and I hereby instruct my administrator to withdraw my funds from the banking business, should I not have done so prior to my death, and to invest the same in real estate, stocks and bonds, for my daughter's benefit; she at all times to be consulted, and I further instruct my said administrator to place

my daughter in full possession of my aforesaid estate on her 18th birthday, and in case she may have passed that age, before my demise within six months from the date of my death, and I do hereby appoint my tried and true friend, — as administrator of my estate; he to act conjointly with my daughter, and I direct (having implicit confidence in his integrity and ability) that he should be required for the fulfillment of this trust.

"In witness whereof I have hereto set my hand and seal, in this the town of Wilmington, state of North Carolina, this twenty-ninth (29th) day of October, Eighteen twenty-nine (1829)."

"Witnesses: (Seal) JOHN LOYD.

"James D. Strange,

"Robert L. Bligh."

"Oh, ho! my uncle. This is well, indeed. Who should be that tried and true friend, but the cashier of your bank—Herbert Lathrop, your affectionate nephew? But let us see, these witnesses, James D. Strange and Robert

L. Bligh. I remember hearing my uncle say that Col. Strange replied to his request:

"Do not insert my name in the will,

John, until I return from Europe; people, you know are sometimes lost at sea."

"So that accounts for the name not being filled in."

"Strange and Bligh both took passage on the Media some two months later than this will is dated.

"Their signatures are there—indisputably there.

"The Media is rocking to and fro somewhere between the surface and the bottom of the deep blue sea—she never reached port.

"The witnesses on uncle's will were lost at sea.

"Why, trouble and danger disappear before me as dew before the sun.

"I hereby appoint my tried and true friend, Herbert Lathrop, as administrator of my estate, to act conjointly

with my daughter, and I direct (having

implicit confidence in his integrity and ability) that no bond be required."

"The will is now complete.

"The name filled in is that of Herbert

Lathrop.

"Now, Uncle John, your time is short,

indeed."

Herbert carefully replaced the will in the envelope and placed all the papers back in the box as he had found them, then returned it to the vault, put on his hat and coat and unlocked the bank.

He opened the door, passed out, closed and locked it and started up Market street, but stopped in a saloon and downed a bumper of brandy; then lighted a cigar and meandered on as though he were going to quiet slumbers.

Meanwhile Angus Bruce had reached the dock. The knowledge that he was loved by Clara Hill had almost made him happy, notwithstanding the fact that she expected to change her name to Loyd within 24 hours. He knew

John Loyd well—in fact, Loyd was his banker—and he had fully determined to talk to him plainly and at once, believing that if he knew that Clara wed him only at her father's bequest and while another held possession of her heart that he himself would decline the union.

He argued that Clara not loving the banker, he would thus save her from a life of unhappiness, and perhaps the banker also, and in time perhaps even he, the pilot's son, might call Clara Hill wife.

With these thoughts in his brain he hastened ashore and in the direction of the Loyd mansion. Just as he turned the corner within one block of the house he encountered Herbert Lathrop.

"What! Captain Bruce? It gives me pleasure to see you; you are going to my uncle's?"

"I was, Mr. Lathrop, but it is rather late for calls. I am the bearer of a letter from Miss Hill to the banker's daughter; perhaps it is best that you deliver it, though I promised to do so in person, and besides there is a business matter on which I wish to see Mr. Loyd."

"By all means come—do not be recreant to your duty, for you can see them both, and if you do not see them to-night, you will probably never see

Miss Loyd again, as she will to-morrow night become Mrs. Clarence Hill; while my uncle at the same time will be wedded to Miss Clara, and after that I do not think you will see him soon.

They will probably be absent for six months on a wedding trip."

So Angus accompanied Herbert to the house; he unlocked the front door, and they entered the hall.

CHAPTER VIII.

"MY GOD, IT'S MURDER!"

Herbert took Angus Bruce by the arm and conducted him to the library, where he lighted a lamp. He then knocked on his uncle's door.

"Uncle John! Captain Bruce is here, and desires to see you."

"Why, it was hardly necessary to arouse him to-night; to-morrow would have answered," said Angus.

"Well, nephew, I have retired, but let Angus enter the room, if he would see me."

"Now walk in and see my uncle, captain, and in the meantime I will notify my cousin that you are below, and wish to see her."

"She probably has retired," said Angus, who could not understand how it was that Herbert Lathrop was so ready to arouse both his uncle and cousin at that time of night, to see him on matters that he had no reason to think important. "If she has," he continued, "do not awake her, you can deliver this letter."

"Oh, no danger of her having retired," said Herbert, "and this the last night of her single life," and he hastened out of the library, closed the door, and hastily ascended the stairs.

He entered his room, lighted a lamp, then pulled off his gaiters and put on a pair of light slippers, next took off his coat, and unbuttoned his shirt sleeves at the cuffs, rolled them well up, then put on a light dressing-gown, hastily proceeded to the upper end of the hall, and tapped on Fannie's door.

"Fannie! Fannie! have you retired?"

"Yes, Herbert, but am I wanted?"

"Angus Bruce is in the library and wishes to see you. He has a message from Clara Hill."

"Tell Angus I will hasten down," was Fannie's reply.

Herbert hastened to his room, unlocked and opened his trunk and withdrew therefrom the sheath-knife. He looked in the glass.

"I am very pale," he said, "but do not tremble; there is no time to falter now; too much is at stake—a swig of this brandy will help me—there, now, I feel a man."

He walked out of his room, but left the door ajar.

Stealthily down the stairway he stole,

and to the outer door of his uncle's bathroom.

He did not see the figure of Aunt

Mag hugging the side of the entry as he brushed by her, yet he had not more than entered the bathroom door than she was right behind him.

The door he opened noiselessly and left open, so that nothing should impede his gress.

The door from the bathroom into his uncle's room was open. There was no light in the room, but the oil lamp

standing on the table in the library lighted it dimly.

Herbert could see his uncle sitting on the side of the bed in his long night-robe and Angus Bruce standing with his back to the bathroom door and almost in front of him. His uncle, wearing not for the darkness of the bathroom and the fact that the position of Bruce would have obstructed his vision, must surely have discerned him.

"So you tell me, Angus," were the first words that struck Herbert's ear, "that

Clara Hill would wed me because it is her father's desire, and that she has told you that you have her heart?"

"I would not have believed that of Clara, and if she tells me so to-morrow I will return from Orton a single man."

"It is well you are here, Angus Bruce," thought Herbert, and in a moment

more he was standing right behind him, with the handle of the sheath-knife firmly clutched in his right hand.

"You see, Angus—but," as his eye caught sight of Herbert's pale face, and the wild look of his eye startled him.

Senatorial Sitings.

MAJ. JOHNSON, of Lexington, has telegraphed to former Senator Blackburn asking him to meet his friends in a conference at Lexington to-morrow. It is rumored that Blackburn will withdraw from the Senatorial race, and that Gov. McCreary will be brought into the contest.

Dr. Hunter's advisers claim that he will receive fifty one votes in the caucus, and seventy-five votes on the joint ballot in the Legislature. They claim that five gold Democrats will vote for Hunter, but Representative Violet says that they will not.

Mayor Todd, of Louisville, is in Frankfort, working for Hunter.

A telegram was received at Lexington Wednesday morning by Maj. P. P. Johnston, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, from Jo Blackburn, stating that Blackburn will be in Kentucky Thursday, reaching Frankfort Friday.

The friends of John W. Yerkes are still expecting to see him figure in the senatorial fight.

A boom for Judge Holt was started at Frankfort Wednesday. Representative Bailey, of Magoffin, who seconded Hunter's nomination, is pushing the Holt boom.

The Courier-Journal says: "It is said that one of the plans of the Blackburnites is for Blackburn to resign the nomination and let the caucus nominate a sound-money Democrat, in order to prevent any sound-money Democrat from voting for Hunter."

Senator Holloway, of this district, yesterday told the Louisville Post that he was for a sound-money Democrat for Senator, but that he would take no part in revolutionary methods that might be proposed in the Senate.

RICHARD C. HOOKER, a former United States Navy officer, has offered his services to Greece.

The Senate Committee has agreed to report the Alaskan boundary treaty without amendment or change.

MAJ. WOOD, of Mt. Sterling, who was appointed Senator last week, is getting gay at the capital. He lunched with Hanna the other day.

ALL the members of the Cabinet have indicated a purpose to make few and gradual changes in the personnel of their departments.

In spite of a feeble protest from Senator Hoar, the credentials of Maj. Wood were referred to the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections.

NICHOLAS COUNTY Democrats will hold a primary election May 15th. Resolutions were passed excluding all Democrats who voted for Palmer or McKinley.

A WIDELY known Wisconsin publisher, who resides at Green Bay, writes March 6th, 1895, as follows:

"Five years ago I became so nervous that mental work was a burden. I could not rest at night on account of sleeplessness. My attention was called to Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and I commenced to use it with the very best effect. Since then I have kept a bottle in my house and use it whenever my nerves become unstrung, with always the same good results. My son also takes it for nervousness with like never failing success. I have recommended it to many and it cures them. All who suffer from nerve troubles should try it. It is free from narcotics, perfectly harmless and gives strength and energy."

FRENCH ARMY AND NAVY.

England's Traditional Enemy Not Behind Her in Armament.

The French navy ranks next to that of England in numbers, while in efficiency and fighting qualities the French ships are fully equal to their English rivals. In fact, in naval architecture the French early took the lead, and many of the English types of ships were modeled after the French designs, says The Chautauquan. One of the chief differences between the English and the French armored ships today is in the disposition of the armor and the consequent design of the hull. English designers have striven to protect the men working the guns, and to do this they have reduced the length of the ship's armor. French and naval architects, on the other hand, have given little attention to the protection of men and a great deal to the protection of the water line. Therefore they have reduced the breadth of the ship's armor.

It is worthy of note that France is the only great power which levies a tax on such of her citizens as either do not enlist in the standing army or who enlist for a shorter term than three years. Only those who are officially declared "impeccable" are exempt from such a tax. It is payable annually as long as the liability to service lasts, and the revenue from this source amounts to about 30,000,000 francs, or $6,000,000, annually.

The officers of the French army receive a very thorough education at the different military schools. At the head of these (although not exclusively military) stands the Polytechnic school in Paris, which admits 150 pupils annually after a competitive examination. The course occupies nine months in the year for two years.

As it is impossible to keep under arms for three years the entire annual contingent of recruits, the law provides for the discharge of thoroughly trained men at the end of the first or second year of active service in such proportions as to bring down the peace strength of the army to the number annually determined upon by the general assembly. Preferences in this connection are decided by lot. For this purpose every recruit at his enrollment draws a number, and only those having the highest numbers are entitled to consideration.

Costumes of the Spreewald.

Consul General De Kay writes a paper entitled "An Inland Venice" for The Century. It is a description of life in the Serbian swamp, Vendland. Mr. De Kay says: "School out" at the village school of Burg is a pretty sight. The substantial brick building overlooks the ever murmuring highway, and the boys and girls, instead of stringing up a dusty road, tumble into punts and pole away for dear life—the boys much like other boys, but the girls reduced facsimiles of their mothers and elder sisters, clad in bright but short raiment and visible afar off through their strange mob caps with wings. As one moves down stream from Burg by Leipe to Lubbenau, these wings grow smaller and collapse, while the skirts grow longer and more resemble the ordinary dress of women. At a dance the Spreewalders know instantly, by the peculiarities of her costume, from what village a woman or girl has come. At Leipe the multitudinous skirts of alarming girth are no more. The gown reaches the ankles, and the cap fits close to the head instead of resting on a framework as in Burg. Thus the dress in Leipe is perhaps more graceful, but it is more commonplace. It no longer testifies to that pride of the peasant father or husband which is shown by the number of yards in the skirts of his woman folk and the variety of their caps, by the richness of their dress as well as their jewelry.

Always Play Cards For Money.

"England is termed puritanical," said a New Yorker who has been in London a good deal, "but English people who consider themselves very proper do things sometimes which would shock people of a similar sort in this country. For instance, even clergymen often play cards for money, and women do so as a matter of course. I never played a game at an English house at which there was not a stake."

"The stake was small if women were among the players, and possibly only a few shillings changed hands, but it never seemed to occur to any English people I ever met to play for fun. The people were of the middle class, which is anything but fast."

"Fancy an American clergyman playing cards for money! He would be considered a bad lot by many if he played cards even for fun. And certainly a young woman who arose from a card table with a dollar, more or less, of a man's money in her possession would be considered fast, to say the least."—New York Sun.

Burned Them.

He is a Bath (Me.) clergyman, and, of course, somewhat unacquainted with new fangled forms of vice, to say the least. Accordingly, when he espied a nickel in the slot machine at a seaside resort last summer his curiosity was aroused, and he dropped in a nickel. Luck was coming the clergyman's way that day, and, to his intense horror, ten nice cigars rolled out of the machine in response to the titillations of its interior as the nickel rattled through it. In fact, the good man was so scandalized that he took those cigars away and burned them—one at a time.—Boston Herald.

Forests In Europe.

According to the Hon. F. Lawley, Russia in Europe has 527,500,000 acres of forests, Sweden coming next with 42,000,000. Germany has 34,000,000, Austria slightly over 24,000,000 and the British Isles less than 3,000,000.

Happenings in Judge Webb's Court.

THERE were lively scenes in Judge Webb's court several days this week. Alonzo Jackson and Jim Helyey were assessed $7.50 each for indulging in a controversy over favors at a colored dance.

Nettie Smith and Laura Turner each paid $7.50 for the privilege of relieving themselves of pent-up cuss words, in East Paris. The same pastime cost Henry Kelly a similar sum.

More Turnpike Trouble.

A DISPATCH from Georgetown states that unknown parties left a note Monday night at the toll-gate near the Bourbon-Scott line on the Leesburg and Newtown turnpike, threatening to blow up the house if any more toll is collected. Gatekeeper G. W. Jones and his family have moved out, but a new man is keeping the gate and collecting toll. This is the same toll-house that was set on fire two weeks ago, and for which offense Will Wright and Geo. Anderson are now confined in the Paris jail.

Another tollgate in Lincoln county was destroyed Monday night.

The recent raids on tollgates in Fleming County have caused considerable excitement. The President of the Elizaville and Fairview turnpike has armed the gatekeepers, and it is said they will shoot the first person who tries to tear down the gates.

Woodford county will institute condemnation proceedings against all the turnpike roads that have not been surrendered to the county.

The Fiscal Court, in session at Lancaster, Wednesday, authorized the Sheriff to take a vote at the next election as to whether or not the people should purchase the turnpikes. There are ninety-three miles of turnpikes in Garrard county, which could be purchased for about $35,000.

Raiders destroyed a gate on the Lancaster pike near Stanford for the second time Tuesday night and left letter to President D. W. Vandever, saying that his neck and that of his son-in-law, Judge W. E. Varnon, would pay the penalty if any more toll was collected. (2t)

Kentuckians At Washington.

WASHINGTON is still crowded with visitors, many of whom have lingered at the capital to land a position of some kind.

Col. J. L. Bosely, of the Reporter, has been at the Capital for about ten days and has a good chance of securing something nice. We hope the President will be good to him.

Editor Sam'l Roberts, of the Lexington Leader, is sure to land in a soft berth—presumably the Internal Revenue Collectorship at his home.

K. J. Hampton, of Winchester, and Green Tribble, of Somerset, want to be United Marshal.

The belief prevails in the Treasury Department that Chief Clerk Logan Carlisle will remain at his present post of duty. It was talked around that Secretary Gage has requested him to stay.

J. Speed Smith is after a position in the Treasury Department.

W. F. Welsh, of Beattyville, wants to be Consul General to Hawaii.

S. E. Smith, a colored politician, is anxious to be minister to Haiti.

There are three applicants for every Federal position in Kentucky.

CAGED.

It was born behind bars, but it knew it had wings.
And it felt God had meant it for happier things.
And it sang of the joys that it never had known—
Of feathered flights over fields flower-strewn,
Of the green of the forest and gold of the wheat,
Of the thrill in the tree-bough touched by its feet,
Of the feel of a lily-leaved brushed by its breast,
And the splash of a raindrop caught on its crest.
It sang of the beauty, the rapture of flying,
The palpitant air to its heartbeats replying,
Naught over, naught under, save limitless blue.
And the music of wing-strokes, rhythmic and true.
It sang, and men said that its song was good,
But not one understood.

Then they brought in a wildbird, entrapped in a snare,
And a day and a night held it prisoner there.
And a night and a day, unbelieving, distraught,
With impossible fate for its freedom it fought.
Though it bled at the breast blindly beating the bars,
As if strength of desire should force way to the stars,
And men pitied, and said: It was free its life long,
Who could bid it endure but a day of such wrong?
And they flung wide the doors, and the bird, flashing through,
Swept away like a leaf in a gale from their view.
Then the other, behind the closed bars of its fate,
Once again sang its heart out, its need, its create
Of the broad and the boundless. In passionate song,
It besought men to right for one day its life's wrong:
To bestow for a day or for one only hour
The leave to make proof of its God-given power.
For one hour only to float on free wings
In the world where its soul lived, the world of best things,
Of commensurate effort and gain, of desire Unlinked from despair, mounting higher and higher.
Till lost in attainment, the world of clear visions,
True measures, high aims and untrammelled decisions,
The world God had made it for. So its song rose,
Ecstatic, tumultuous, thrilled with wild woes
And delicious complainings, until the last note
Broke off in an exquisite cry in its throat.
And men listened, and said that the song was good:
But not one understood.

A DEED OF MERCY.

BY HARRIET F. CROCKER.

When Miss Penelope Owens made up her mind to do a thing it was as good as done. Few things were surer of being done, and well done, than those to which she applied her resolution, and so it happened that because she was sitting on the front porch of her pretty, rose-covered cottage one hot summer day, leisurely rocking, and reading from time to time bits from a current magazine, and because, so sitting, she looked up the street and saw advancing toward her a great, solid band of sheep, a plan came into her head which proved an important factor in her life.

A mass of woolly, bleating things came sweeping onward, past the pretty cottage, sending clouds of California dust over the cypress hedge upon the back of scarlet verbenas, and into Miss Penelope's very face, but Miss Penelope never moved. Her soft eyes, full of compassion, gazed out upon that patient, plodding throng of creatures, and a look of pain swept across her face as the poor things tried eagerly to catch a mouthful of the fresh, green grass which formed Miss Penelope's well-kept border just outside the path.

The horseback rider urged them on, and on they hurried, huddling their fleecy, dust-brown backs together till it seemed as though one might walk across that living flood. Behind the great flock came the usual accompaniment—the wagon in which the lame and exhausted sheep were carried by the herders—and as Miss Penelope looked, one faltered and fell, rose feebly and was picked up and placed in the wagon with the others.

When the last cloud of dust had settled, Miss Penelope smiled to herself, an odd little smile. "It's a queer thing to do, maybe, but it's no one's business but my own, and if I choose to do missionary work in front of my own house instead of away off in heathen lands, I'm going to do it."

Miss Penelope took the five o'clock car into the city and visited a certain place of business on a bustling street, held a half hour's conference with the proprietor, looked over numerous catalogues, talked prices and then took her departure. Not for home, however. To an uptown office in a great block she next made her way, then, as the summer twilight was gathering, sought her corner and waited for her car.

One morning a great dray, drawn by four horses, toiled along the dusty road and pulled up at the little white gate under Miss Penelope's cypress arch. Neighbors began to wonder and conjecture to neglect the cooking of their noonday meals, when Miss Penelope's blue sunbonnet having duly peered over into the wagon and inspected its contents, withdrew into the house and the men who had come with the dray began to lift and tug at the queer, long, stone something in the wagon.

Old Mrs. Green peered through the blinds of the next house and called out, excitedly: "Mariar, come here this minute! I do believe Miss Penelope's went and had her own coffin made, or a sarcophagus or something!"

But Maria, leaning interestedly over the old lady's shoulder, said: "Pshaw, mother, 'tain't no such thing! Looks a heap more like a watering trough to me."

And so in course of time it proved to be. "Just like one of her queer notions," said one. "But it'll be a blessing to poor dumb brutes, just the same," said another, and a third neighbor declared that nothing on earth could tempt her to have a public watering trough put up in front of her house.

The men within a mile around thought it was just the thing, and began to wonder why they hadn't taken up a collection and got one themselves long ago.

But when in a few days a handsome iron drinking fountain was brought out from the city and set up at one end of the long stone trough, and a bright tin cup was chained thereto, people said: "Well, Miss Penelope does beat all for doin' deeds of mercy!"

And the lady in question, sitting on her vine-wreathed porch, said to herself, as she watched the thirsty school-children stopping on their way home from school in the hot summer afternoons: "I really couldn't spare that $150 very well, but I can do without the new matting I was going to get, and I'm going to make over my best dress and pinch along awhile to make up for it, and the dollar a month extra water tax won't be very much. Anyhow I'm going to enjoy it."

And she did enjoy it. What a pleasure it was the next time a band of sheep came through to see the thirsting creatures crowd and push around the low stone trough, full to the brim with clear, cold water and how eagerly the jaded horses drooped their heads forward to the welcome draught. And no less satisfied was she to see the dusty shepherds lift awkwardly their wide sombreros as they dismounted and caught a glimpse of her before they drank cupful after cupful from the iron fountain.

All this filled Miss Penelope's queer soul with intense satisfaction. "Who-so giveth a cup of cold water," she thought to herself, "maybe it's just as much a deed of mercy as to send money to the heathen."

One morning Miss Penelope, as was her custom, worked among her flowers, digging around the rose-tree with her sharp little hoe, turning up the earth with her trowel, and tying up a sagging vine here and there. Suddenly she heard down the road the unmistakable herald of an approaching herd of cattle—the confused lowing of a hundred plunging and plodding cows mingled with the whistles and peculiar cries and calls of the attendant cowboys who in wide felt sombreros and picturesque attire rode at each side of the moving mass of tossing horns and rough-coated bodies.

Miss Penelope dropped her garden tools and went up the steps of the porch. It was the way she paid herself for the expense and trouble of setting up the drinking place—this quiet enjoyment of hers in the eagerness and satisfaction of the poor creatures, weary with the travel of many miles over dusty roads.

As she sat thus, looking out across the cypress hedge upon the surging crowd of cattle, a panic-stricken child pushed open the gate and ran up the walk. "Oh, Miss Penelope," she cried out, shrilly, "let me come where you are! I'm afraid of the cows!"

Miss Penelope rose and went down the steps. How womanly and tender she looked as she reached a hand down to the little girl and smiled reassuringly. The cattle were crowding around the long, stone trough and a dark-eyed, weather-bronzed cowboy leaned from his mustang and helped himself to a drink from the fountain. As he did so he heard the child's frightened cry and saw the pretty, womanly little picture. As he drank he studied the woman's face furtively from the shadow of his wide sombrero and a sudden look of wonder seemed to come into his deep eyes. But he assisted the others in keeping the struggling herd under control and finally, after all were satisfied, helped to start them moving again, in a wide, dark stream of hoofs and horns, broad, red backs and switching tails, down the dusty road. Then, with a word to the cowboy nearest him he turned his horse and rode back to the fountain.

As Miss Penelope, standing at the gate with the child, glanced up at him he lifted his sombrero and sprang from his saddle. "Reg pardon, madam," he began, courteously, "but I want to thank you for the great privilege we have enjoyed. It's a rare thing in California to find a watering place along the road."

"You're entirely welcome, I'm sure," responded Miss Penelope, cordially. This was nothing new. Dozens of grateful passers-by had paused to thank her for providing such refreshment for man and beast and it was only a simple act of courtesy in this particular cowboy to do the same. So she wondered a little why he did not take his departure now that his errand was done.

Perhaps he enjoyed the shade of the mighty fig tree which spread its great limbs and dense foliage far out over the fountain and into the street.

Why should he look at her so? Why didn't he go? Oh, whom did he look like, and who was he?

At that moment her startled eyes caught sight of a long, red sear across the man's forehead, for his head was bared, and in another instant she found herself leaning against the cypress hedge quite weakly and feeling as though it must all be a dream. Then she gathered herself together and spoke in a quiet voice which trembled a little.

"Horace—Horace Markham, is it you, or am I dreaming?"

"You are not dreaming, Nellie," the man replied as quietly—"it is Horace Markham and this is Nellie Owens, come together at last in this strange way."

Miss Penelope suddenly lost her hold upon herself and began to cry—a soft, nervous, sobbing cry, and murmured something brokenly which the stranger accepted as an invitation to come in. So he tied the fired mustang to the ring in the fig tree's trunk and followed Miss Penelope into the house, while the open-mouthed child went on her way schoolward, stopping often to walk backward a few steps and wonder at what she had seen.

But old Mrs. Green, behind her window blinds, called excitedly to her maid and told her all about it. "Depend upon it, Maria," she quavered, "that old maid's got a history and I know it, and I hain't a mite of doubt in my mind but what that's her bean come back. But a cowboy—my sakes alive!"

It was the same old story with which everybody is so familiar—a lover's quarrel, a hasty parting, a hot-headed youth flinging himself away from the quiet New England home, out into the world, to be swallowed up in the yawning jaws of the wide, wide west; a girl left to eat her heart out in proud, unspoken sorrow and refuse her various suitors because she had no love to give them.

The old, old story again, but this one at least had a happy ending.

"And he wa'n't just a cowboy after all," said Mrs. Green, as she cackled forth the romantic story of her next door neighbor, "for he owned all them cattle and was just a passin' through to look after 'em. And he's worth considerable, they say—got a big stock ranch up north, and Miss Penelope's rented her house for six months and went up there with him till he gets things in shape to leave 'em and come down here to live. She says she ain't never goin' to leave that there drinkin' fountain and waterin' trough, and I don't know's I blame her when it sure is the means of bringin' her a husband. Oh, yes, she's married. He came back in a day or two, lookin' as slick as you please, and they were married by Elder Stewart, Wednesday evening a week ago."

"Well, I hope that man'll make her happy, for she is a good, kind-hearted woman, and I call that queer freak of hers—settin' up that waterin' trough in front of her house—a regular deed of mercy."—Union Signal.

THE LIFE OF A CLAM.

Curious Semiparasitic Existence of the Bivalve.

The clam's body is completely ensheathed in the mantle, except for two openings, through one of which the foot can be pushed out. The other is for the siphon, or what is commonly known as the "neck" of the clam. In some respects the clam may be better off than we are, for he has a little brain in his foot and also a gland for secreting strong fibers. With this he spins a byssus by which he can attach himself to whatever he likes. He does not seem to have to search for food, but waits for it to come to him. He makes a burrow in the mud or sand, attaching himself to the bottom by the byssus. Then he thrusts his siphon up through the mud and water until it reaches the surface. The siphon is made up of two tubes, the water flowing in through one and out through the other.

When the inflowing current, laden with minute plants and animals, reaches the gill chamber, some of these are sifted out and retained for food, while the water and waste matter flow out through the other tube.

The clam's eggs are carried by the mother on her gills. When there are fish in the water with them the mother clam discharges the eggs, which soon hatch, but if there are no fish they carry the eggs until they decay. The reason of this strange behavior is this: When the eggs are set free in the water, they soon hatch, and the little ones swim about until they find some fish to which to attach themselves. They live for a time on the mucus of the fish and then drop off, sink to the bottom, and form burrows for themselves. This curious semiparasitic life is no doubt a reversion to the habit of some ancient ancestor.—Margaret W. Leighton, in Appleton's Popular Science Monthly.

Progress in India.

India is said to have been transformed within the last generation from a lotus-eating agricultural land, living in the historic past, to a country where manufactures take an active lead, whose cotton goods are rivaling those of Manchester in eastern bazaars, whose trade in jute is world-wide and whose teas are fast driving those of China and Japan from the markets of the world. The tea districts of India and Ceylon, whose names even were unknown but a short time ago, are now being rapidly populated by a heterogeneous collection of people and are beginning to hold the same position as that held by America for the peoples of Europe. They are regions where people of different tongues, often in their own countries hostile to each other, are thrown together for the first time and are harmonized by a community of interests and finally welded into one race, speaking one language.—Chicago News.

RUSSIAN RESTAURANTS.

The Dishes They Serve—A Gastronomic Luxury.

One of the most fashionable restaurants in Moscow is the Hermitage, and another is the Moskovski Traktir, or Grand Hotel de Moscow, near the entrance of the Khitigorod. At both of these it is much the custom to begin dinner at the table itself with two or three commanded dishes of the shing, appetizing caviar, with a slice of lemon, and a corner twisted from the hot kalatsch, accompanied by a radish and an olive, or, perhaps, a pickled plum, with the inevitable "little glass," leads to the "cold plates" and "sauces;" for the Muscovite chef serves his fish in the middle, not the beginning of the repast. Among dishes of game the gelinotte is noticeable (the Russian ryabehik); but this bird is more welcome in the disguise of an orokrochka than cooked whole. In a mayonnaise, also, the ryabehik is highly popular. This gelinotte, or "double snipe," has been very truly described as a bird partaking of the characteristics both of the grouse and the partridge, with a slight under-flavor—in which it resembles the capercaillie—of turpentine. Such a peculiarity is, no doubt, due to its habit of feeding upon the tender topmost shoots of the fir tree. The Russian peasants have legends about every bird and beast, and they say that the gelinotte had once the finest breast of all birds, but it vexed its Creator, who took this away and gave it to the rhyper. There is a preparation of mutton, styled sehabik, which might be worth importing hither; and beef is curiously metamorphosed from its British forms into the zrazi, the shoftoffe, and the azu tatarsk. Kidneys, potchki, with truffles, may appear, along with omelettes; and cretes de coq mingled with sweetbreads in a ragout; or pojarski de poularde aux legumes, a plate named after the hero who delivered Holy Russia from the tyrannies of Poland. The zarok, or roasts, will include telyatin, i. e., veal, and turkey, which is called indyk, the duck, ootka, the cock of woods, teterew, as well as, when in season, the quail, perpel, the dopyer, and the teal, cherok.

The dish par excellence, however, of the Russian bill of fare is certainly sterlet, which, whether named in anneau a la Russ, or made into an ooka, or blended with slices of sturgeon in a solyanka, must be recognized as a notable discovery for all travelers. The sterlet is a gelatinous, semisturgeon-like fish, but much smaller than the sturgeon, having a long, ugly nose and no bones, but very nice as a matelotte, when, however, a single portion will cost the guest at least 24 rubles. A solyanka des sterlets is charged three rubles the portion, while the finest fried sturgeon is not more than a third of that price. This specialty of the Voiga river is, past all question, a great gastronomic luxury; the white, dissolving, nutritious flesh has all the delicacy of the trout, all the crispness of the turbot, all the digestibility of the sole, united in a manner to make many a foreign sea and stream jealous, with very good cause, of the cold and turbid Voiga. The pleasant, hot dinner cakes, already spoken of as kalatsch, should be eaten along with sterlet.—London Telegraph.

Flying Fish.

A sea captain tells of his sailing in southern seas where flying fish abound. They would sometimes in their flight in the night come aboard the ship and leap to the deck. He had three cats that, though they were lying asleep below, would hear the sound whenever a fish struck the deck and would rush up to get it. They distinguished this from all other sounds. The crew tried to imitate it in various ways, but could not deceive the cats.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE PAGE COILED SPRING WOVEN WIRE FENCE.

MILLER & COLLINS, Agents,
PARIS, KENTUCKY.

This is a smooth fence that will turn any kind of stock. It is made from the best hard steel drawn specially for the purpose.

HOW IT IS MADE.
The large steel wires forming the horizontal bars are first coiled around a 1 inch rod, thus practically becoming COILED SPRINGS their entire length. These are securely tied together by 10 cross bars to the rod. The cross bars are best quality of annealed wire (galvanized), wrapped three times around each horizontal bar.

ITS ADVANTAGES.
Being a SELF REGULATOR it is ALWAYS ready for business, slacks up for 30 below as cheerfully as it takes a new grip for 90 in the shade, gently, but firmly persuades a runaway team to reconsider its action. An unruly bull is safe as a canary in its cage; it saith unto the festive hog, "thus far shalt thou go." The fierce wind and drifting snow pass by and it heeds them not. There is no terror in the locomotive spark. The trespasser is not led into temptation, and the rail stealer's "occupation is gone." The hired man and the lagging tramp, alike scorn it proffered shade. Like the model housewife, when well supported, it is always neat and tidy.

THREE POSTS TO THE 100 FEET.
Economy is not our sole object in placing posts for farm fence at the unusual distance of 20 to 30 feet apart. Farmers say, "the closer the posts the better the fence." That may apply to common fences, but depending largely on its elasticity we PREFER the long panel. For cemeteries, lawns, yards, etc., they should of course be nearer, 12 to 20 feet is not objectionable.

We have completed (and are now building) a lot of this fence for Bourbon farmers and you can examine into its merits for yourself.
Estimates cheerfully furnished. You may put up the posts and we will build the fence, or we will contract to do the whole job. If you are needing any fence, see us. We will save you money and still build you the best fence made.
Respectfully,

The Page Wire Fence in Bourbon.

MILLERSBURG, KY., May 4, '96.
MESSRS. MILLER & COLLINS, Agents,
Paris, Kentucky.
Gentlemen:—I have had the Page Woven Wire Fence on my farm for about eighteen months and am well pleased with it. It has proved to be all that is claimed for it. It turns all kinds of stock and is as tight as it was the day it was put up and has stood some severe tests. A horse of one of my neighbors fell across the fence a few months ago and was not taken off for several hours but when taken off the fence went back to its place all right with the exception of a few staples. During the storm of April 24th a good-sized tree was blown across the fence and bent it down to the ground. As soon as the tree was cast off the fence went up all right and was as good as ever with the exception of one broken wire and a few staples out of place.
I am so well pleased with the fence that I am going to put up more of it right away.
Respectfully,
(5my-1f)

THE FARMING WORLD.

PUSHING THE LAMBS.

How a Rapid Growth Can be Maintained Readily.

The principal object to be secured in raising early lambs for market is to mature a fine animal of good size and condition as early as possible. Earlyness and good weight are the two principal items to be secured, and care should be taken to secure these as rapidly and as economically as possible.

One important item is to give the lambs an early start. The first few days is the most important time, and if by neglect it is stunted at this time, no after treatment will entirely overcome the effects. It should be kept warm and dry, and the dam should be fed and cared for in a way that will best enable her to supply plenty of good milk.

When the ewes are fed liberally with ground feed and the troughs are of sufficient length to admit of the lambs eating by the side of their dams, the lambs will learn to eat when very young.

Whenever they have learned to eat fairly well, a separate place should be provided for them, where they can be fed by themselves. This place should be arranged so that the lambs can run in and out at will. They should be fed in this pen at least twice a day. Wheat bran, chopped feed, oil meal, combined with corn meal, makes a good combination.

While it is an item to feed liberally, it can hardly be said to be a good plan to keep feed before them all the time.

The quicker they can be taught to eat and the better they are fed the better growth it will be possible to secure, and the less drain it will be upon the ewes.

By feeding the ewes liberally so that they can supply plenty of milk, and feeding the lambs liberally, a quick growth can be readily maintained, and usually the earlier they are ready for market and the better their condition the higher price it is possible to obtain. —N. J. Shepherd, in Western Rural.

TEAMS ON THE FARM.

They Should Be Well Mated as Regards Strength and Gait.

An important item in getting the most work out of the teams is to have them mated properly. While it is very nice to have a team of the same color, size and marking, it is common sense and good judgment to have them well mated as regards strength, gait and powers of endurance. A weak horse should not be expected to pull as large a load as a strong one, neither should a small horse be compelled to work by the side of a large strong one, or be expected to do as much. A young, growing horse should not be expected to work as hard or as long, or to do as much heavy work, as one that is well matured and developed.

A high-spirited, quick-motioned horse should not be compelled to work by the side of a slow, lazy animal. To make the most out of them mate the horses, or rather the teams, with a view to equality of gait, strength and endurance. See that they are in a good thrifty condition. Feed with a muscle producing rather than a fat forming ration.

Horses that have been idle during the winter, or for any length of time, should be put to work gradually. Begin by moderate exercise and increase as they become accustomed to it. This is especially the case with a young horse. Many a young horse is seriously, if not permanently, injured by being put to work too early, and worked too hard before their bones and muscles are properly hardened and their joints sufficiently strong. Until reasonably well matured a young animal is not able to bear constant and severe exercise. A little care in mating and putting to work will help materially in getting the most out of the teams.—Field and Farm.

FOR CARTING MANURE.

Handy Contrivance Put Together by an Ohio Farmer.

While on a recent trip through a portion of our county I saw a contrivance that struck me as a good thing. While nearing the home of a farmer I saw in the road the marks of moving manure.

HANDY MANURE CART.

chine wheels, and as they were so far apart I could not conceive of them as belonging to a mover—especially at this time of year—so I concluded to investigate it if I could succeed in tracing the tracks to the hiding place of the object in question.

On arriving in sight of the barn I found the object of my search. It proved to be a cart placed on an old pair of moving machine wheels. And the farmer, at that moment, had it backed up to his stable door and was loading it with manure. Every few mornings when the box was full he hitched his team to the cart and drove to the field to unload.

The rough pen sketch accompanying this will show its construction. In size the box is about six feet long and five feet wide and two feet deep. —C. L. Reamer, in Ohio Farmer.

When stock are kept in a good, thrifty condition, there is much less liability of their becoming infested with vermin.

The best table fowls—the games, Dorkings, Houdans and Langshans—do not have yellow legs.

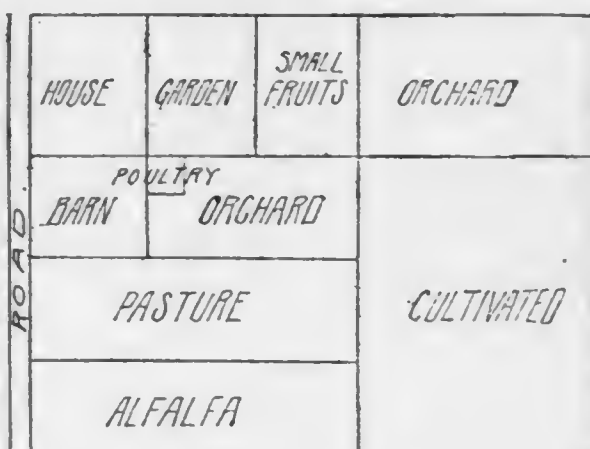

Young pullets rarely make good mothers; old hens are better.

TWENTY-ACRE FARMS.

In the Irrigated Districts of the West They Pay a Handsome Profit.

Intensive soil culture has become the rule in some sections of the west. One man cannot irrigate and cultivate more than a 25-acre tract. This area must be carefully handled to make a good income, yet many farmers are learning that there is more on 20 acres than formerly on a quarter section. The 20-acre farm is destined to be the future home of independence. Men who attempt more than this will be speculators, with the chances for or against success according to the market fluctuations. The day of speculations in farming has passed, and the man who seeks a comfortable home must produce some of everything possible on the very smallest area.

A 20-acre farm might be divided into seven very convenient lots. The house and lawn should occupy one acre, and be enclosed by a neat picket or wire fence. One acre should be fenced separately and kept for a garden. The barnyard and corral need occupy but one acre. An orchard of five acres, with a small corner cut out for a poultry house, would be sufficient. Three acres sown to grass to be cut each season for hay would yield an abundance. A similar tract of three acres fenced separately ly should be a meadow for pasture. The remaining six acres will make enough of a field for the cultivation of corn, wheat, potatoes and root crops.

The products of six acres under cultivation in the west where irrigation is practiced may safely be estimated as follows: Two acres of wheat, 100 bushels; one acre of corn, 50 bushels; one acre of oats, 70 bushels; one-half acre of potatoes, 150 bushels; one-quarter acre of beans, 15 bushels; one-quarter acre of onions, 100 bushels; one-quarter acre of barley, 60 bushels; one acre carrots, turnips and rutabagas, 1,000 bushels. These figures are not an average in Utah, where small farming is practiced. The yields are reported almost double the figures given, in some instances. Of this six-acre yield there would be a surplus of each product to sell.

Three acres in alfalfa will yield two crops of hay and one of seed. The hay will average two tons an acre each cutting, making 12 tons of hay. A three-acre alfalfa pasture will keep two cows, two horses, 20 sheep, 20 hogs, with several calves. The pasture and hay field should be rotated each year. After a few years a part of the cultivated area should be planted to alfalfa, and one of the grass plots plowed. Fences could be made of woven wire, and be easily removed from one tract to another.

The five-acre orchard should have one acre devoted to strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, gooseberries and currants. A half acre should be planted to about four varieties of grapes. The balance of the orchard area should contain choice trees of various fruits, with the outer rows composed of nut-bearing trees. These serve as a protection against wind and storm, and are as valuable as the fruit trees. The yield upon these several tracts cannot be estimated, as so much depends upon proper culture and the market.

Experienced farmers in Utah who practice intensive cultivation give the following figures on yields to the acre: Strawberries, $600 to $1,000; small fruits, $300 to $800; apples, 400 to 600 bushels. The stone fruits produce in proportion to other varieties. One man with three acres of grapes reports an average yield of $650 an acre every year. The grapes are sold green, made into wine and raisins. Peaches are sold as green fruit and evaporated.

The 20-acre farmer can pay all his expenses, ride in nice carriages, wear good clothes, support and educate his family, and save from $500 to $1,000 a year for the time of need. This cannot be accomplished by wild speculation. It requires a careful attention to the details of the little farm. No hard, slavish physical labor is required. Why should men toil and worry over their thousands of acres and come out behind at the end of the year when the new agriculture shows them how to live happy and contented on a 20-acre farm? —Joel Shomaker, in Farm and Fireside.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Four ducks are plenty for one drake. Usually fat fowls are uncertain breeders.

Dark feathers usually cover a dark skin.

With early broilers sex cuts no figure.

Lazy hens lay on fat, but busy hens lay eggs.

If breeding for profit breed to please the market.

Dry-picked poultry generally brings the best price.

Coal oil applied to the roosts will kill all kinds of parasites.

Hens often fail to lay in winter because they are too fat.

Hens that are laying regularly should have a little extra food.

Provide the laying hens with plenty of shell-producing material.

Tobacco stems put in with the straw in the nests will prevent lice.

Early hatched chickens should not get chilled this month, or brood diseases will be the result.

Milk, fresh or sour, buttermilk, skimmed milk, mixed with meal makes a good feed for poultry.

The best and most natural floor for the poultry house is dry earth, kept clean and dry. —St. Louis Register.

CLEVERLY MANAGED.

The Master Stroke of a Matrimonial Match Maker.

In an Illinois town a Miss Blizzard lately demonstrated practically beyond question the truth of the old saying so strenuously insisted upon by many women: "The quickest way to reach a man's heart is through his stomach."

Miss Blizzard kept a select boarding house, and among her patrons were Mr. William D. McBride and Miss Addie May McDowdell. In view of subsequent developments, the assumption is warranted that Miss Blizzard, liking those two young people very much indeed, reached the inevitable feminine conclusion that the best thing such a nice couple could do was to fall in love with each other as promptly as possible, get married and live happily ever afterward.

It was a genial and friendly conclusion to reach, and it should not be unsafe to say that, having arrived at it, Miss Blizzard lost no time in herself assuming the role of the "god in the machine," and so guiding events as to inevitably bring about the final blissful denouement upon which her kindly heart was set. It is easy to understand that, having Mr. McBride and Miss McDowdell under the same roof with her, Miss Blizzard was mistress of the situation to an unusual degree, and it is to be presumed that she worked those two young people one against the other in every way likely to make each see the other's good points in the very strongest light possible.

But she did more. With the pulse of the situation under her touch always, it would seem that Miss Blizzard knew to a nicety just when the crucial moment was reached, and at that crucial moment, knowing that Mr. McBride's sex made it imperative that he should take the initiative in bringing matters to a climax, the crafty Miss Blizzard played her strongest card. She prepared a little supper aimed at the very citadel of Mr. McBride's affections, and at that supper she saw to it that Mr. McBride was helped to the choice of each and every dish. The happy man was feasted like a lord, with pretty Miss McDowdell facing him as he feasted.

Miss Blizzard rose from the table a winner. During the very progress of the momentous repast, Mr. McBride's heart melted within his bosom, and, gazing fondly upon Miss McDowdell, he then and there challenged her to become Mrs. McBride. The challenge was accepted, a license procured, a minister was summoned, friends were bidden to the joyous scene and the knot was tied.

Miss Blizzard deserves a roseate immortality. Her healthy confidence in the irresistible nature of the conjunction of good things to eat with a pretty girl to look at warrants the conspicuous perpetuation of her memory. —St. Louis Republic.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS.

Some Small Items of Useful Information.

A mirror should never stand or be hung where the sun's rays fall upon it. The light and heat produce a chemical disintegration of the quicksilver at the back, which injures the reflective power and makes the glass seem dim and dull. Many cooks believe the white meal, made from southern corn, is superior to the yellow, made from that grown at the north. Nevertheless a Johnny cake doesn't seem to advertise itself as such unless it is a golden yellow. The yellow meal is very sweet and nice.

Beans soaked 24 hours in tepid water and then cooked a short time only, merely long enough to make them tender and well done, and beans put on to cook with little or no soaking and boiled a long time, are quite two separate and distinct dishes. And if you don't believe it you may demonstrate it by experiment. Those soaked the longest will be by far the most appetizing.

In cooking the breakfast table cereals, the object is to give them a chance to absorb water and to cook the starch thoroughly. The larger and drier the grain the more time must be allowed for the accomplishment of this result. Whole grains are improved, by a previous soaking; those that are finely ground must be mixed with cold water to prevent the formation of lumps. Others should be sifted through the fingers into boiling salted water. Cook fast at first, then more slowly over boiling water, covered, and without stirring. —Detroit Free Press.

Drinking Contaminated Water.

Water that is left standing in the kitchen or bedroom, and, above all, in the sick room, over night is liable to contamination by the absorption of impurities afloat in the air in such rooms and to be rendered wholly unfit for use. No matter that the water is cold, even to near freezing; it is so much more liable to absorb and hold in solution the foul gases and organic particles to which it has been exposed. It is dangerous to use such water. Water should not be so left, but if it should chance to be it should be thrown away. Freshly drawn water only should always be used for culinary purposes as well as for drinking whenever practicable. Moreover, the faucets over sinks and wash basins are always more or less liable to contamination, hence the first water that flows on opening them after they have been left all night without use should always be let flow away—it is dangerous to drink and unfit for the tea kettle or for cooking water; even boiled disease germs are unwholesome. —Sanitarium.

Waist Linings.

An absurdity in wash waists which has appeared is that of organdie or linen with a tight lining. The success of the shirt waist depends upon the ease with which it can be fastened on and its comfort while on. A tight lining defeats these objects. Lace in vulgar quantities also is seen upon some wash waists intended for common use. The tasteful woman probably will avoid lacyness in lace should she use it at all on her laundered blouses. She no doubt will find it more satisfactory to keep individuality in color than to indulge in vagaries of cut. —St. Louis Republic.

Gained Twenty-Four Pounds.

A Woman Who Was Utterly Broken Down Restored to Health and Weight.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

A New Era reporter recently had the privilege of partaking of a bounteous noonday repast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kenady, near Hope, Ind., a few miles across the line in Bartholomew Co. At the table sat the eight-year-old daughter of this happy couple, who had just returned from school. It was raining at the time and consequently her clothing was damp. She complained of aches and pains all over her body.

"Arthur," said Mrs. Kenady, "as soon as you finish your dinner I want you to go over to the drug store and get a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The rheumatism is settling in on Lucy as sure as you're living, and I wish to stop it at once in its early stages, and save a long sickness and physicians' expense."

The mother got the child good and warm and had her remove her wet clothes, and then she related her peculiar experience with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She said: "I had him get those pills for Lucy because I knew they will cure her for the cure they cured me, as all my neighbors will tell you. After the birth of my youngest child here, about two years ago, I was completely broken down. I took medicine from the physician who had attended me through my confinement, but grew worse and worse until I could scarcely go about at all. I tried all the doctors, with about the same result. Pains would shoot all through my body, and the least exertion or more bending over would cause me to have smothering spells, and the suffering was terrible—all most unbearable. I thought it was caused by my heart, as I often had fainting spells. When everything else had failed to relieve me and I had given up all hopes of recovery, I chanced to read some testimonials in the New Era and the Indianapolis News, and the suffering of the people who made the statements were so similar to mine, that when I read that they had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I at once resolved to try the medicine. I procured a box and took the pills according to directions, and soon felt much better, and could go about with ease. When I had finished six boxes, never missing a dose after each meal, I was cured. I have taken them since, when I felt badly, and I now feel as well as ever."

"It is a pleasure now to do my work. When I began taking the medicine I weighed 100 pounds, now I tip the beam at 133. I can eat anything that comes along, and sleep like a log. Before I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I could scarcely eat anything or sleep at all. I had no appetite, and what I ate wouldn't stay on my stomach. I feel that the medicine saved me from an untimely grave, and wouldn't care to be where I could not get it. Father used the last of a box a few days ago for sick headache, and hasn't been troubled since. That is why we are without them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

But also appeal to a means of relief of the torture—if physical—which produces the groan. Rheumatism is a prolific source of agony in its acute inflammatory or chronic forms. But it may be annihilated at its birth with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, unlike the poisons in minute doses often prescribed for it, is perfectly safe. In malarial, kidney, bilious, dyspeptic or nervous ailments the Bitters is a certain source of relief.
